Life is a journey. People dream of what they want, they make decisions, They meet people, They move on. Throughout life, They build up experience and knowledge. it's called "growing". There is no end to it, and it is independent of background or age.

Vetus Novus wants to help people grow. After all, people grow faster if they are provided with a solid base, nutrition, and enthusiasm. Vetus Novus does this by opening an evening education centre where experts will share their knowledge, especially their experience, with the residents and by letting them experience a lot themselves too.

The Evening Education centre will open a campus in the heart of Loci in February. This is a growth strategy for the educational institute for adults. From February the campus will provide practical training for adults. From photography to marketing, from coaching to graphic design: all training courses at the Centre for Evening Education are given by independent professionals with years of experience in the sector. "With our top courses for and by professionals, Vetus Novus wants to appeal to people who are looking for a new job, who want a promotion, or who want to start their own business. That is why they are going to organise courses at the weekend and in the evenings after working hours."

There will be a free course chapter for each course. This will give people a good idea of what they can expect and based on that they can choose the course that suits their ambitions the best.

By fully focusing on the synergy between city and school, we create opportunities, both for our students and the local economy. It is a match made in heaven.
